GRAPE VARIETY

Many white varieties in old vineyards in danger of being grubbed up: Tardana, Macabeo, Marisnacho, Doña Blanca, Albillo, Blanquilla...

SOIL AND VINEYARD

Sustainable management. Old bush vines grown in drought between Cabriel and Jucar river.

The Tardana vineyards are 60-70 years old. These vines are located in Villatoya village and in danger of extinction, in an altitude of 400 meters along Cabriel River.

This location makes possible to reach to the appropriate moment to harvest this late ripening grape. Its soils are clayey and very calcareous, albariza type.

The Macabeo vineyards are around 50 years old, are grown at 700 meters altitude in Alborea village on clay-calcareous soils with limestone on the surface.

There are other white varieties from mixed plots in danger of extinction of about 80 to 100 years old, located between the villages of Alborea and Casas Ibáñez in clay and calcareous soils.

WINEMAKING

Minimal intervention at the winery, Artisanal and traditional winemaking. Harvest picking by hand and sorting in the vineyards and after in the winery.

The Tardana variety ferments during 3-4 weeks with whole bunch without overcoming nor squeezing and has a 3 months aging in tinaja (clay pot).

The Macabeo variety is made with direct pressing without contact with skins and aged in barrel during 3 months. A racking is made to slide and to make the coupage.
